Its's me (Mickey Mouse Version) 🐭

Hello 👋, this is me, the smaller me who grew up in a small town with dreams of exploring the world beyond. This curiosity has led me through various paths, each filled with its own set of successes, failures, and life lessons.

I'm Rishabh Sharma, and my journey has been one of constant learning and evolution.

I grew up in a close-knit family where values like hard work and honesty were taught. My parents were my first teachers, teaching me the importance of resilience in the face of adversity. From an early age, I developed a passion for acting, which became a central part of my life.

One of my proudest achievements was performing a standup in front of the whole college. This standup helped me overcome my fear of addressing a huge crowd and more importantly, making them laugh. It was a confidence booster for me and after this, I participated in and held many public speaking events. It taught me that I should always keep trying things out of my comfort zone to keep learning and growing.

However, my journey hasn't been without its hurdles. I remember when I became the secretary of my college's drama club, and the first play that I wrote and directed was a big flop. It was a tough period, and I felt like I had let myself and others down. But this experience was a turning point. It taught me valuable lessons about humility, the importance of adaptability, and the need to embrace failure as a step toward growth. Since then, I've approached challenges with a mindset of learning and improvement, which has made me a stronger and more resilient individual.

There have been many moments of joy along the way, like the time when me and my roommate kept a stray dog in the hostel room, and also the time of my farewell from the theater club when I could confidently say that I led this group, which had won numerous prizes under me. These memories remind me of the importance of simplicity and the small happy moments that make me happy.

Looking back, my life has been a tapestry of experiences—both good and bad—that have shaped me into who I am today. I've learned to embrace challenges as opportunities, and I approach each day with a sense of curiosity and a desire to grow. I believe these qualities align well with the dynamic and fast-paced environment of a startup, and I'm excited about the opportunity to contribute and grow alongside your team.
