DeepThought Design Guidelines

Target Audience

1- Parents: Visionary Parents who look for real education, opportunity for their kids to discover express themselves. They are process centric, have a strong value system and have a clear vision for their child's education- they don't follow the crowd. These parents can be impressed by usual marketing gimmicks or run of the mill creatives.

2- Students: Young Innovators and Researchers who love to speak, listen and share ideas with peers. They get a lot of joy by building on ideas of each other. These children love to create rather than consume. They may prefer creatives that provoke their curiosity. They don't like to be treated like children, but would like to be seen as young intellectuals. Kiddish creatives turn them off.

3- Investors: Futurist Thinkers who can foresee how the education space is changing. Very mature and composed individuals who prefer tranquil designs with minimalism. Voracious readers who can read a page in half a minute's time or even less. Very well read intellectuals who can guess the thought before it is said and yet humble enough to read it with an open mind.

Graphic Design Guidelines

1 Color Palette: Main color Blue - #033ff
Shades of Grey, Black, White
This shade of blue is very bold and has to be handled carefully
If required a dark shade of this can be used with people's images (as in LinkedIn cover-pic)

2 Images: prefer B/W images as they fit into the blue shade of DT
Sketches with thick grain are preferred - detailed, ornamental creatives
We prefer sketches as they represent a bold, rebellious, organic outlook.
White background can be used incase a color image is used Prefer images with less number of colors, use a bluish tint on the image if required, if the images has too many colors, to blend it to the theme.
Bold colors and designs for social media marketing creatives and soft colors for UI and website creatives.

3 Headings Font: Geliat ExtraBold and Geliat ExtraLight with 1pt stroke
Normal Text: Roboto

4 Layout
The elements hierarchy can be documented before starting
The hierarchy can be executed with size, color, negative spaces
Use gridlines - for alignment, spacing, symmetry
Use negative spaces properly- evenly spread out - to give importance

5 Logo usage
Do not modify the logo
Leave enough space around the logo
Use the variant of the logo based on background color

6 Composition
Blend all elements together, use shadows if required- overall harmony of the creative matters.
Use place holders to include text into the main content. Be creative with place holders.
Avoid place holders if the text naturally blends in. At times font, color alone blends the text

7 Text
Short length of text (do not use long text, split into columns if required) or if required you could split the text vertically by using more lines
If the text is heavy, use small font size(12) – people who are interested will read it even if it is small. Those not interested will skip even if it is large.
Not all text is meant to read, some text is supporting text to setup credibility.
